In this private residential project, interior designer Fabyani Shahib of FS Interior Design is experimenting with boundaries simply to make a space more than a space to function and to live in, but to also have a soul and identity. Fabyani believes that a home should reflect the identity of its owners, which in this case is a successful young couple in the city of Jakarta.

As soon as you enter from the main entrance, all eyes will be focused on the ceiling design which is the vocal point of the room design. The open space concept allows each room to appear more spacious, and the ceiling plays a significant role in zoning the room. At the moment, some of the rooms are decorated with the wife's paintings. The predominantly white interior is to realise her dream of having a beautiful white house that can also serve as a gallery for more of her paintings in the future.

The designer explains further about the design concept, "The theme is "living in comfortable luxury for everyday life", which requires the use of materials that adequately reflect beauty and luxury while being easy to maintain, at the same time to procure and manufacture built-in furniture that functions optimally for daily use. This house, like its owners, has a flowing and welcoming gesture and layout; even though it looks exclusive from a distance but once you get inside everything feels in balance and in place."
