

DAIMYO

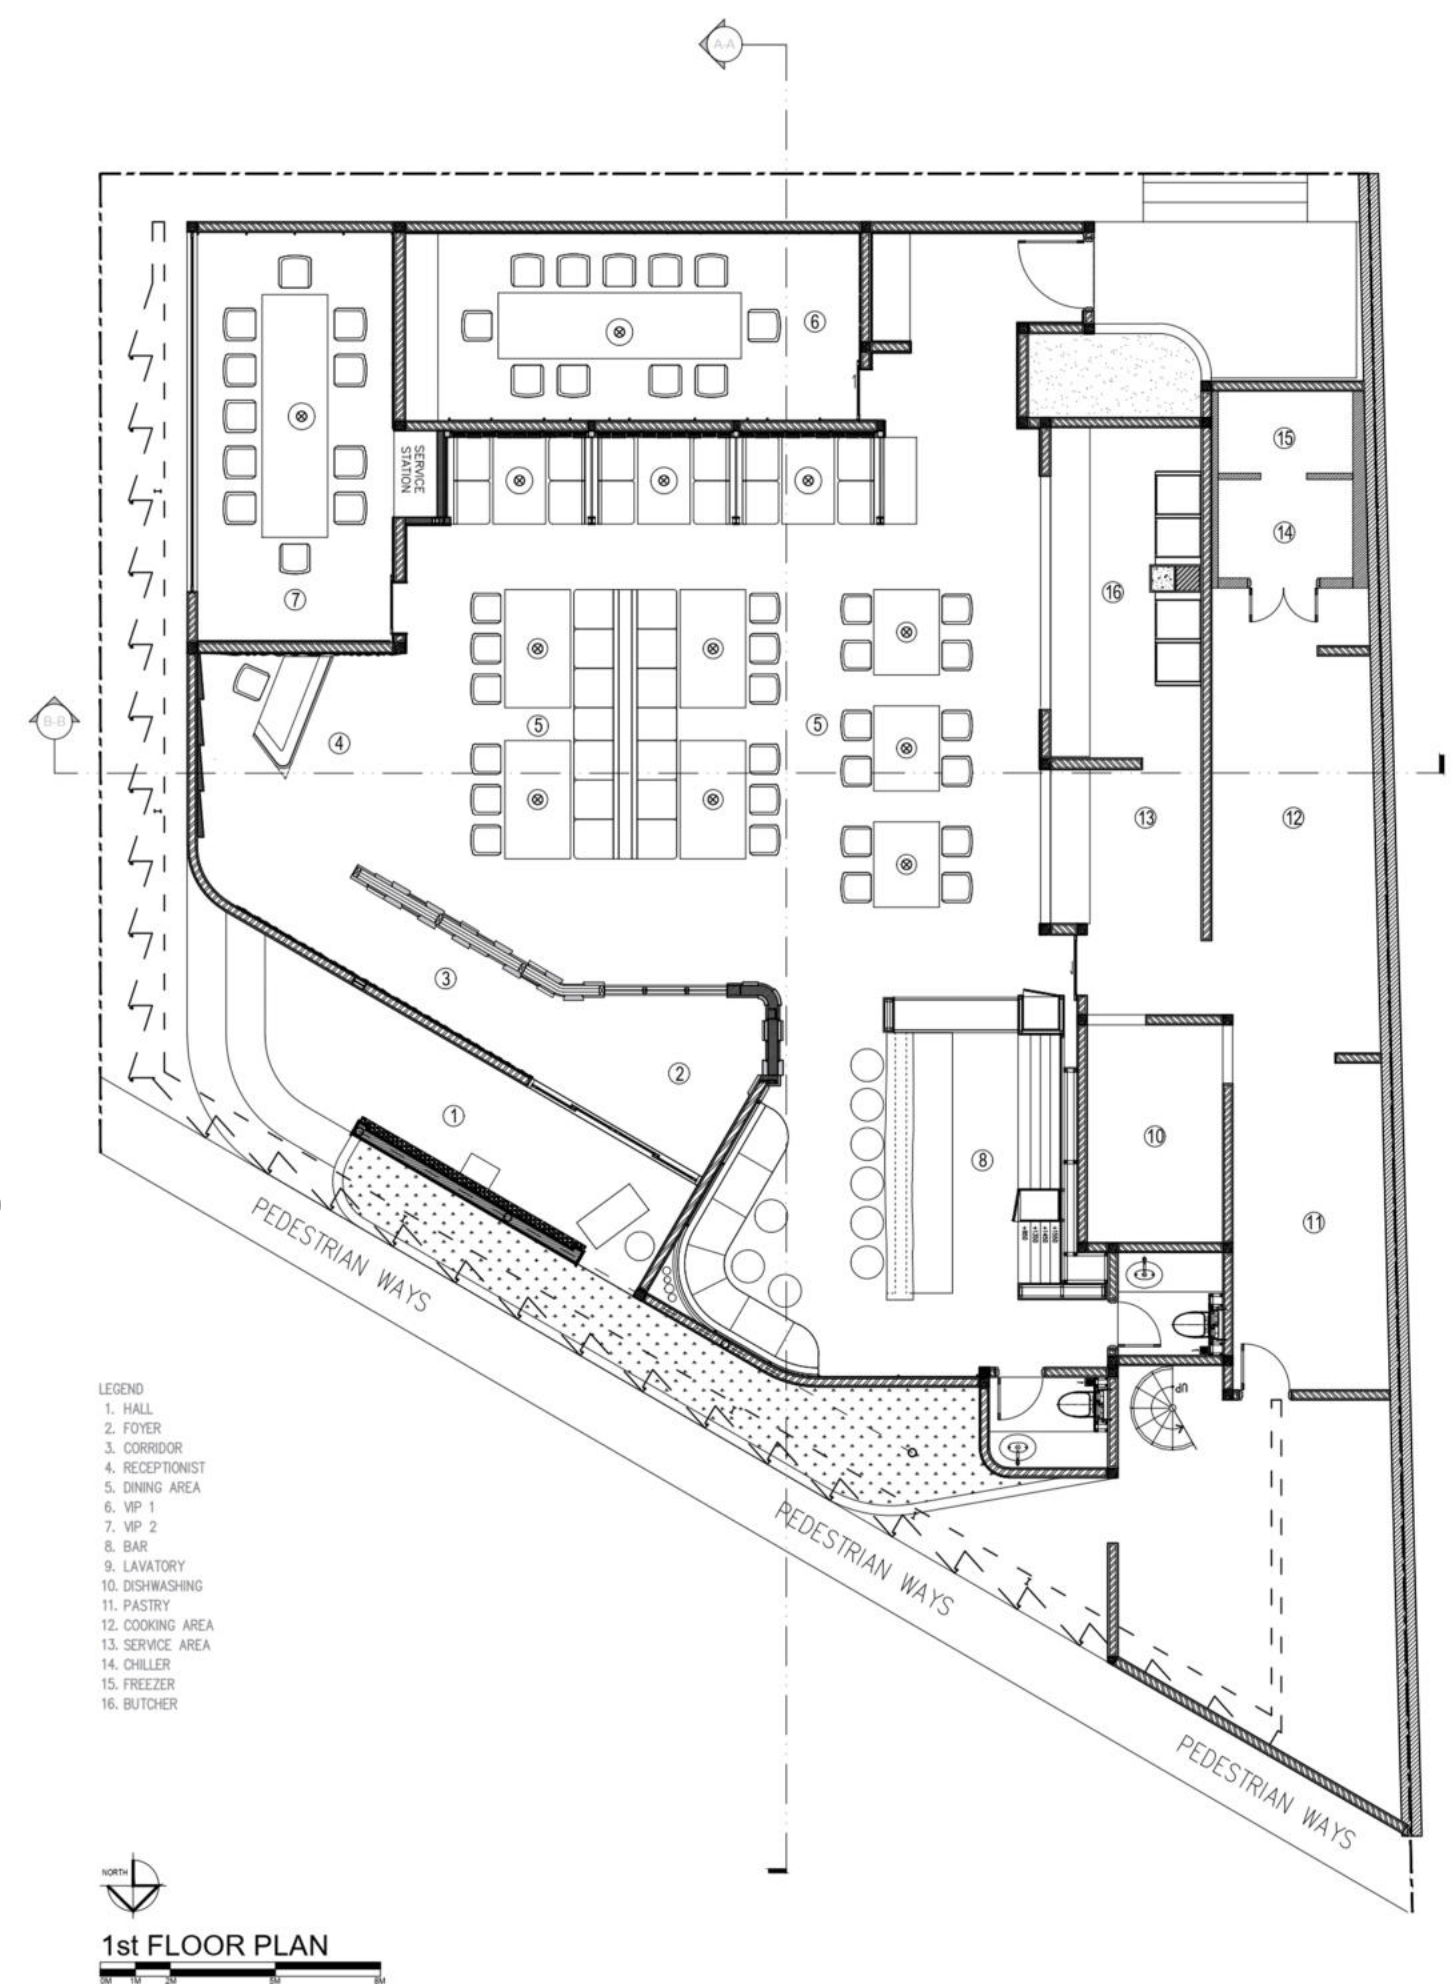

Bali

The building front and interior architecture of this restaurant were both designed by Daimyo. "Daimyōshu" (大名主, head of a respected family) is the root of the word "daimyo," which refers to a person with significant influence in a region. A model of Japanese imperial Samurai armor, which is exquisite, robust, and emblematic of strength and morality, is combined with the Daimyo persona. Each iron plate is attached to the others, giving the armor unique details. The Shogun's armor (Ō-yoroi), which blends honor, strength, and the beauty of traditional Japanese armor, served as the model for the building's exterior. This is symbolically represented by the interior's laser-cut panels' recurrence of colors and patterns, which adds a sleek, understated, and sophisticated touch.

DAIMYO

Bali

This restaurant features two VIP rooms with a capacity of 10-12 people, each with a classic, clean style complemented by traditional Japanese laser-cut designs. The VIP rooms have a predominantly black and gold color scheme. One of the dark back walls is a mural of a warrior on horseback, illustrating the life of an Edo era Daimyo.

The interior environment, with black ambient lighting, focuses the light on the dining table, giving it a distinct character. In addition to providing focused illumination for the meals on the table, the interplay of lighting in the gloomy setting highlights details, textures, and colors. The dark lighting and carefully produced light effects are intended to evoke the glow of lanterns, creating a romantic and relaxing mood.
